There are some areas in my code that were different from the proposed solution. However, it addresses the problem statement. One important thing I learnt is that, it is recommended for constants to be declared as static. Since constants, do not change throughout the life cycle of a program, "static" keyword ensures that it is created only once in memory.